Council funds update of MV Community Plan

What kind of a community is Mission Valley, and what should it become in the future?

Those are questions city planners will be tackling – with the help of area residents and businesses – as they embark on a long-awaited update of the Mission Valley Community Plan.

“The hardest thing about this update is that everyone has an opinion about Mission Valley,” said senior planner Brian Schoenfisch, who is coordinating the effort, expected to take at least two years. “It’s not a quiet, isolated community. It’s more of a regional community.”

As part of the fiscal 2010 budget adopted June 8, the City Council approved $1.2 million to begin updating the Mission Valley plan, last revised in 1985. Councilmember Frye and community leaders have been urging for years to get it going.

“I think everybody’s excited” to finally have the planning funded, said Linda Kaufman, who chairs the advisory Mission Valley Planning Group. “Think of our community plan as kind of our road map. . . . Because ours is so outdated, it doesn’t give us much of a guide.”

Broadly speaking, the update involves three steps: assessing existing conditions, setting a vision for the future and charting a course to bring that vision about. It will include key elements such as the San Diego River, transportation, infrastructure, sustainability and development.

Schoenfisch, who knows the valley well as city liaison to the planning group, said Mission Valley’s needs are many. It lacks a “main street” core, as well as parks and schools. Its major natural asset, the San Diego River, has been viewed by developers as more of a nuisance. Parcels have been densely built out with little or no emphasis on walkability or interconnectivity.

“Mission Valley was primarily an auto-based community back in 1985,” Schoenfisch said. “We’re trying to change all that, (incorporating) bicycle, pedestrian, transit and trolley.”

Mission Valley community plan update under way

There's also been a philosophical shift regarding the river, which was channelized in the 1980s to control flooding and facilitate development. A "river park master plan" process already under way seeks to restore the waterway as much as possible to its natural state; create interlinked parks and trails along its shores; and have future development oriented toward and offering access to the river and instead of walling it off.

"Everything (in Mission Valley) should form off of the river," Schoenfisch said. "It's the greenway that ties everything together."

Rob Hutsel, executive director of the non-profit San Diego River Park Foundation, said the river master plan will integrated into the community plan as a key component.

"By bringing the two together, we'll really be able to think about how the river should be part of the community," he said. "The river 25 years ago was really seen as a flood-control project. ... Now the opportunity is there to really change the culture of the valley."

Schoenfisch said the first step will be to form a "stakeholders group" to start discussing proposals in monthly public meetings. Recommendations from the audience will be considered along with those of the panelists.

"What we really want to push at this time is getting people involved," he said. "You don't have to be a stakeholder to be part of those workshops."

The Department of Planning and Community Investment will create a new Web site for the plan in coming weeks. Log onto www.sandiego.gov/cpci and look for the "Mission Valley Community Plan Update" page.

In the meantime, Schoenfisch said anyone interested in the stakeholders group or seeking other information can contact him directly at (619) 533-6457 or bschoenfisch@sandiego.gov.

"This is important for the future of not only the community but the region to get this vision in place so it can be implemented," he said. "Mission Valley can be a model sustainable community."

Frye joins community in vigil service pleading for release of two U.S. reporters held in N. Korea

Laura Ling

Donna and two staffers joined local broadcast personality Lee Ann Kim and scores of other concerned San Diegans at Clairemont's Korean United Methodist Church June 18 in a candlelight vigil for two American journalists imprisoned in North Korea.

Laura Ling, 36, and Euna Lee, 32, were working for Al Gore's California-based Current TV when they were arrested March 17. Reporting on human-rights abuses of North Korean women and refugees, the two were captured near the Chinese-North Korean border.

North Korea's highest court convicted them of unspecified "grave crimes" June 8, sentencing them to 12 years of hard labor. North Korean prison camps are notorious for starvation, torture, sickness and death.

Addressing the Clairemont audience by telephone, Ling's sister, also a journalist, said no one in the women's families or the U.S. government has had any word from or contact with the captives since their sentencing. She asked the congregation to sign postcards to the North Korean government appealing for the pair's release, which Donna and most of the others there did.

Additional information is available at <http://liberatelaurea.wordpress.com/> and www.linkglobal.org.

The vigil, co-sponsored by the human-rights group LiNK, the San Diego Asian Film Foundation and more than a dozen other local non-profit groups and associations, also included the screening of a 50-minute documentary about the heartbreaking plight of North Korean refugees in China. The film, Shadows and Whispers, showed in anguishing detail how children and families are suffering from brutal famine and oppression in North Korea.

Frye dedicates Sefton Field as Mission Valley's first park

Faulconer joins in hailing land transfer, bike path completion

It's been a Little League venue for decades, but Sefton Field is now Mission Valley's first officially dedicated public park.

By a unanimous vote June 23, the City Council approved a formal dedication of the 19-acre site -- seven acres of ballfields and 12 acres of surrounding open space -- transferring it to the Department of Park and Recreation from the city's Transportation Department.

The dedication would take a two-thirds vote of the public to overturn.

"This is a major step for Mission Valley," Councilmember Frye said. "This community has a dire lack of park land, and I am committed to seeing many more parks here in the future."

Under city guidelines for the amount of park land per 1,000 residents, Mission Valley -- one of San Diego's most densely developed communities -- should already have more than 50 acres of parks. Addressing that deficit has been a priority for Councilmember Frye.

That's why she and Mission Valley residents are grateful to have Sefton Field -- on the west end of Hotel Circle between the San Diego River and Interstate 8 -- officially preserved for public use.

A paved bike path from Ocean Beach to Hotel Circle was laid late last year along the southern boundary of the ballfields. After months of delays, the final 100-foot section of that path -- under a railroad crossing in the Mission Valley Preserve -- was finally completed in late June. The bike path design and construction cost was $3 million, $2 million of which was provided by the San Diego River Conservancy, a state agency whose board of directors is chaired by Frye.

Sefton Field, adjacent to the preserve, is maintained by the Presidio Little League under a longtime lease with the city. The league launched its 50th season in February.

The dedication adopted by the Council calls for "additional park-like amenities" to be built at Sefton "as funds become available." If and when that occurs, some of the maintenance costs and responsibilities would shift from the Little League to the Park and Recreation Department.

Councilmember Frye, Council President Pro Tem Kevin Faulconer and San Diego River Conservancy officials held a news conference June 26 to announce the dedication of Sefton Field Park and the completion of a river bike path from Ocean Beach to Mission Valley.

Church members take to streets in Sunday cleanup project

Parishioners cleaned and painted an alley behind Clairemont's Northminster Presbyterian Church.

Instead of worshipping in their sanctuary on Sunday, June 13, 50 members and friends of Clairemont's Northminster Presbyterian Church scraped, painted and repaired the fences and walls along the alley behind their church.

Pastor Markus Watson and project coordinator Bernard Kuchta explained that serving the community was a good way to worship God and connect with the neighbors who only see church members coming and going on Sundays. It worked! The fences and walls along that particular alley are tagged regularly, and grateful neighbors came out to watch, thank the church, and give water to the workers. Several neighbors even picked up a brush and help paint.

If your group is thinking about doing a similar community service project, contact Kuchta at Northminster Presbyterian Church, 4324 Clairemont Mesa Blvd., (858) 490-3995. You'll want to get permission from the affected homeowners, buy the right color and quantity of paint, or contact Councilmember Frye's office, as he did.

Our thanks go out to Northminster and other faith groups that improve the quality of life in our community.

Spacious new digs for families of hospitalized children

Donna joined Mayor Sanders and jubilant charity providers June 13 to mark the pre-opening of a new Ronald McDonald House of San Diego. Covering 65,000 square feet, the Serra Mesa facility has 47 guest rooms available for families of children undergoing treatment at nearby hospitals. Built atop a parking structure just up the street from the smaller guest home it will replace, the new facility will begin taking families July 7. Now the Ronald McDonald House Charities, which operates the facility, will be able to serve 20,000 families per year. The charity has to turn away as many as 100 families per month for lack of available.

The original 12-bedroom Ronald McDonald House, opened in 1980, has provided more than 40,000 nights of lodging for more than 14,000 families. The facility provides housing for 43 families a month; day-visitors with children in area hospitals make 1,200 visits per month. The average stay for a family is 8 nights, but some have needed to stay for several months.

The guest house includes a beauty salon, day resting rooms, an arts & crafts center, computer lab, teen center, kids play room, laundry facilities, fitness room, chapel, outdoor sports court, and outdoor serenity gardens.

Donna, Mayor Sanders, Girl Scouts and Ronald McDonald House charities officials were all smiles with a statue of the charity's namesake.

Kids can do the cooking

Wouldn't it be nice if the kids learned to make their own simple meals and treats? Better yet if they learn to clean up afterward!

Here's a way to make that happen. Veteran chef Rosalind Cottingham is offering "Cooking with Kids" classes this summer at the Linda Vista Recreation Center, 7064 Levant St.

Kids will learn to make simple meals and after-school snacks like tortilla pizzas, "strawberry fools," quesadillas, "kooky cookie" sandwiches, nachos, fruit smoothies, "ants on a log," and other stuff.

The classes, for kids ages 8 and older, are offered on July 15, 16, 22 and 23 from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Cost is $25. For more information or to reserve a spot, call the recreation center at (858) 573-1392.

Trade those old bulbs for better

Here's a chance to exchange your old, energy-wasting light bulbs for free, highly efficient compact fluorescent bulbs (CFLs) and get discounted admission to Birch Aquarium at Scripps in the bargain.

On two summer Saturdays, July 18 and August 15, the city of San Diego and SDG&E are offering the light-bulb exchange from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the aquarium, located at 2300 Expedition Way west of the UCSD Campus in La Jolla. Included are two-for-one same-day admissions to the aquarium.

You are invited to exchange up to five incandescent light bulbs for new CFLs, which use about 75 percent less energy than incandescent bulbs and last up to 10 times longer. If you have expired CFLs, bring them along to be properly recycled (they cannot be thrown in the trash because the bulbs contain a trace of mercury).

In addition, a reusable grocery bag filled with a low-flow shower head and two bathroom-faucet aerators are available for free by filling out a brief form at the SDG&E tent.

One caveat: You must be an SDG&E customer to participate (you will be asked to show your driver's license or an SDG&E bill as proof).

Charity and local businesses provide major rehab of home

building helicopters and later started his own landscape business. Lucinda teaches piano and cares for the Hughes children.

The couple has been helping foster children in San Diego for the last 18 years while raising their own three children. They also adopted two of their young foster children. The entire family is very active in their church and youth ministries. But John suffered a heart attack and, more recently, a stroke. Due to John's disability after the stroke and demands of caring for the children, the Hughes' home was in dire disrepair. That's where Rebuilding Together San Diego and its partners came in.

With help from contractors and volunteers, the family got interior and exterior painting, landscaping, clean yards front and back, stucco repair, plumbing and electrical repairs, and new carpeting, light fixtures, ceiling fans, appliances and furniture.

Councilmember Frye thanks all the sponsors for their time and generosity and wishes the Hughes family well.

A Serra Mesa family in need got a big helping hand – and much more – from a local charity and its local business partners.

John and Lucinda Hughes, who have helped numerous foster children over the years but who are now facing health and financial setbacks, were the recipients of a May 30 home-rehabilitation project. It was spearheaded by Rebuilding Together San Diego, in collaboration with Sears Holding Corp., the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 569, My Plumber, Real Deal Furniture, Painters & Drywall Industries Joint Apprenticeship Training Center and Martin Drywall Co.

A Vietnam War veteran, John served two years in the Army and earned military honors. He worked

Stricter drought conditions declared

Outdoor watering restricted to certain days of week throughout City

The City of San Diego has adopted mandatory water conservation requirements, effective June 1, 2009, as part of moving the City to a Level 2 Drought Alert Condition. Level 2 includes many mandatory water restrictions. In addition, all voluntary Level 1 conservation practices become mandatory. These water conservation measures include:

- Limiting the watering of lawns and landscapes to three days per week from June through October. Those days are:
  - Even-numbered addresses – Saturday, Monday and Wednesday.
  - Odd-numbered addresses – Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday.
  - Apartments, condos and businesses – Monday, Wednesday and Friday.
- Watering only between 6 p.m. and 10 a.m., up to 10 minutes per watering station.

The move to the Level 2 Drought Alert Condition is in response to cuts in water supplies available to San Diego made by the City's water wholesalers, the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California (MWD) and the San Diego County Water Authority (CWA). The City must cut its demand for water to meet the new supply levels or face substantial penalty rates from MWD and CWA. For more information, visit www.sandiego.gov/water/conservation.

Longtime Linda Vista Library manager retiring

Lowell Waxman spent 35 years promoting books, reading

Like the encyclopedia, or the complete works of William Shakespeare, you could always find Lowell Waxman there among the library stacks.

But no longer. After nearly 35 years of effectively – if quietly – helping San Diego readers find what they want or need in the great repository of information and knowledge, Waxman is retiring.

Manager of the Linda Vista Library since 1998, Waxman has worked in every branch in the city after starting his career in the popular Children's Room at the main library downtown. The Queens, N.Y. native, who holds a Master's degree in library science from the University of Denver, said he was drawn to reading and scholarship as a young man in the 1960s.

Lowell Waxman

"I saw how important information was to understanding the political conditions of those times, and how important it was for the public to be well-informed," Waxman said.

Gratification for a librarian comes slowly, incrementally, as for a farmer nurturing a field. "We're helping people day by day, little by little, to become better informed," Waxman said.

He best explained his understated passion for books and learning in a newspaper essay written 20 years ago on the occasion of the Clairemont library's 30th anniversary. Waxman (who was manager there at the time) wrote that "the library serves as an anchor of stability in a sea of change."

Librarians, he wrote, deal "with the richness of imagination. The neighborhood library remains the place to go for the great escape afforded by writers of thrillers, romance, mystery and great literature." He called it both a "safe haven and port of entry to the real and imaginary worlds and people far beyond our community."

By far, the greatest change he witnessed during his long career, Waxman said, was the advent of the Internet and the astonishing information revolution it has wrought.

"But the Internet will not put libraries out of business," he said. "The library is one of the few places where everyone – from 9 months to 90 years old – can find something.

"Google is a powerful tool, but it can be overwhelming. The role of the librarian is still there; people still need help finding things, and the library is still a great place to come to read and learn and find enjoyment."

An accomplished photographer, Waxman said he plans to travel some, continue playing softball and "volunteer, where my interests in public policy and economic justice converge."

Undergrounding of utilities to be discussed in Clairemont

Clairemont and Bay Ho residents are invited to an upcoming community forum to discuss the City of San Diego's Utility Undergrounding Program.

The forum, hosted by officials from the Department of Engineering and Capital Projects, is scheduled 5 to 7 p.m. July 30 at the Clairemont High School auditorium, 4150 Ute Drive.

More information on the undergrounding program is available at (619) 533-3841 or www.sandiego.gov/undergrounding.

Clairemont planners want public input on vision statement

For the past few years, a task force under the direction of the Clairemont Community Planning Group has been developing a "vision" for Clairemont. The task force believes that because Clairemont's Community Plan is more than 10 years old, it no longer adequately addresses the changing environment in which we live.

Even though the City of San Diego has recently adopted an updated General Plan and begun the process of revising its community plans across the City, there is currently no timeline for updating the Clairemont Community Plan. Therefore, the Planning Group thought it important to have some common-interest guidelines in place to follow until such time as the Community Plan is updated.

This is a grass-roots effort and has no official standing. However, the Vision's goal is to reflect the community's desires and will assist the City when the Clairemont Community Plan is revised.

The Clairemont Community Planning Group is requesting input from the community, and, more specifically, it's seeking as much public input as possible at its monthly meeting July 21. The group meets at LiveWell San Diego, located at the North Clairemont Recreation Center, 4421 Bannock Ave. Please log onto and review the draft of the Clairemont Vision Statement, then come to the meeting and share your thoughts.

Plenty of outdoor frolicking fun to be had

Take a hike, take a bike or take a kite; Just get out there and enjoy

With its perfect weather and gorgeous open spaces, San Diego is the ideal place for outdoor fun. From beaches to mountaintops, we have an abundance of great recreational destinations close by. Here are a few favorites:

San Diego River: From its headwaters near Santa Ysabel to its mouth in Ocean Beach, the 52-mile San Diego River is one of the region's most majestic and historically significant natural resources. With input from the San Diego River Coalition and other stakeholders, the City of San Diego is developing a master plan that, among other things, will create a linked chain of parkland and trails from the beach to Santee. In the meantime, you can enjoy segments of this beautiful river at the Eagle Peak Preserve, El Capitan Reservoir, Mission Trails Regional Park, Mission Valley Preserve and Southern Wildlife Preserve. For more information, visit <http://sdrca.gov> or www.sandiegoriver.org.

Mission Bay Park: The largest man-made aquatic park in the country, 4,235-acre Mission Bay Park offers a wide range of recreational activities including paths for walking and jogging, and playgrounds for children. It's one of San Diego's most popular locations to fly a kite, picnic or sail a model yacht. Fire rings make it possible to cook out and stay warm. For more information, visit www.sandiego.gov/park-and-recreation.

Mission Trails Regional Park: Only eight miles from downtown San Diego, Mission Trails offers a quick, natural escape from urban hustle and bustle. With more than 40 miles of trails, boating on Lake Murray, camping at Kumeyaay Lake and a beautiful visitor/interpretive center, Mission Trails Regional Park has something for everyone. For more information, visit www.mtrp.org.

Clothing and outdoor gear company Recreational Equipment, Inc. (REI) has a Web site on which you can search and locate other cool recreation sites in San Diego or anyplace else nationwide. The site, www.rei.com/passport, includes downloadable journals and other offerings of REI's "Passport to Adventure" program, designed to get children and families more involved in having outdoor fun together.
